Prevent Blindness America
we all care about our health. we know, in theory at least, that daily exercise and proper nutrition are essential for living longer and staying healthy. we know that unhealthy behaviors such as smoking can lead to a long list of problems as we grow older. we also know that regular medical check-ups or screenings can help find potentially serious health conditions early while still highly treatable. despite what we do know, we often have a few blind spots in our understanding of good health.

Each year, Prevent Blindness America reaches out to millions of Americans with news and information about preventing vision loss from eye disease and injury. People are often surprised by one message in particular: taking care of your vision also means taking care of your health.

Now, more than ever, this message bears repeating. As we take care of our health, we also need to think about our eyes and the precious gift of sight. Choices we make for ourselves and our children can have a significant effect on vision for a lifetime. By making sure we and our children wear proper U.V. protection whenever playing or working outside in the sun, we may prevent or delay the onset of cataract later in life. By making sure we wear proper safety eyewear when playing sports, when working with power tools or chemicals or doing yard-work, we can avoid permanent loss of vision from eye injury. By promoting exercise and good nutrition for ourselves and our families, we can help prevent or manage diabetes and avoid vision loss from diabetic eye disease.

As we age, we also need to think about the need for regular professional eye care. Particularly for Americans ages 40 and older, a regular exam by an eye doctor can help detect potentially serious eye conditions before they cause loss of vision. We recognize, however, that in the difficult economic times many Americans have faced, it is often a significant financial challenge for families to make eye care a priority.

Prevent Blindness America has moved ambitiously to confront emerging threats to our vision health. We’ve launched new educational campaigns such as “Live Right, Save Sight!” we’ve expanded advocacy efforts, such as Eyes On Capitol Hill, that increase awareness among legislators in Washington, D.C. of vision care as a public health issue. We’ve advanced the cause of children’s eye health through the meticulous work of our National Center for Children’s Vision and Eye Health. We’ve built successful partnerships with vision care leaders such as VSP and Luxottica to distribute vouchers to families in need for adult and children’s eye care.

And of course, you have made these efforts possible. The support of our many individual donors, corporate sponsors and institutional partners has extended our organizational reach and impacted the lives, and the vision health, of so many families throughout our nation. We thank you for this generous and important commitment to a lifetime of good vision and good health for all Americans.

...taking care of your VISION also means taking care of your HEALTH.
YOUR VISION, YOUR HEALTH

Few health problems loom larger in the United States than the growing threat of diabetes. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that, if trends continue, one third of Americans and half of ethnic minorities will have diabetes by 2050. Even if we prevent that tragic outcome, we currently face a health care crisis in which 25 million Americans are living with diabetes.

With diabetes comes the threat of diabetic eye disease. The latest Vision Problems in the U.S. report published by Prevent Blindness America estimates that nearly 7.7 million Americans have diabetic retinopathy, an eye disease that is a common complication of diabetes. People with diabetes are also at increased risk of glaucoma, another potentially serious eye condition.

For that reason, Prevent Blindness America launched the Live Right, Save Sight! campaign last year to educate Americans about the risk of vision loss from diabetes. On the web; in the news; and through its toll-free hotline, email campaigns, Facebook and Twitter, Prevent Blindness America provided information on healthy lifestyle tips, the need for regular eye care, and the relationship between diabetes and vision.

As Americans live longer, age-related macular degeneration (AMD) has become a significant cause of vision loss, affecting more than 2 million Americans. The Prevent Blindness America AMD: Awareness Makes a Difference campaign was designed to get information about AMD into the hands of seniors and their immediate families, helping to raise awareness of the need for regular eye care and early diagnosis and treatment to combat vision loss from this eye condition.

In addition, Prevent Blindness America developed a new Healthy Eyes Presentation Series as a tool for community health educators, public health personnel, community and senior center program directors, and other interested members of the public to share information about adult eye health and vision care.

With all its messaging through news media, the web, email and social media, Prevent Blindness America garnered more than 710 million impressions nationwide for eye and vision topics.

Advancing the cause of adult vision and eye health as a national public health challenge, Prevent Blindness America continued its three-year cooperative agreement with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to lead a comprehensive public health effort toward the development of an integrative approach to eye health promotion and vision loss prevention.

Among the partnership’s many successes were:

• adult vision screening programs in a free clinic and federally qualified health center in Ohio;

• development of a distance online pediatric vision quality improvement education module for primary care providers;

• convergence of 45 partners from New York State health department and agencies, federal agencies, health professional organizations, community organizations, and academia to implement activities around vision and eye health;
• awareness-building through a Save Your Eyes Now – Proteja Su Vista Hoy campaign conducted in schools, local health departments, public and private clinics, and health centers in the lower Rio Grande Valley and East Texas;

• analysis of existing national data sets to describe the prevalence of visual impairment, the delivery of vision-related services, and to identify new areas for policy evaluation or clinical research; and

• dissemination of findings through five peer-reviewed journal articles and other publications.

Vision is a critical component of our national dialogue on public health policies. In Washington, Prevent Blindness America continued to support the work of the Congressional Vision Caucus (CVC). The CVC is a bipartisan, bicameral group of Members of Congress dedicated to strengthening and stimulating a national dialogue on the importance of vision and eye health. The CVC seeks to achieve its goals through Congressional briefings, Dear Colleague letters, press conferences, and receptions. The CVC is co-chaired by Representatives Gene Green (D-TX), Phil Gingrey (R-GA), David Price (D-NC), and Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL).

Through advocacy alerts, call-in efforts, and our Eyes on Capitol Hill advocacy day in Washington, Prevent Blindness America also continued to advocate for funding of essential vision programs and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Maternal Child Health Bureau and the National Eye Institute.
May you be blessed for the help you have given me and others. Before my new glasses, I couldn’t read, watch TV, crochet or go on the computer, as it would literally hurt my eyes. Now I can do all of these things, thanks to you.
- Donna

Hello friends,
I just wanted to take the time to thank you all for helping me get my eyeglasses. Everyone I worked with was of great help through the whole process. Keep up the good work so that people like me can see clearly. Thank you, God bless!
- Scott

I can see now, and it is wonderful! I can see without constantly straining and blinking. Before I received my new glasses, I was constantly straining and blinking to try to focus and see. Thank you.
- Suzanne

I just wanted to thank you for all your help in assisting our Lions club in getting eye exams and eyeglasses for people in our area who are unable to afford the cost of exams or eyeglasses. We used to try to screen people needing the exam and glasses to determine their need, and it was difficult for us to do so, because we did not know what criteria to use or what programs were available to help. Since you have been helping us, it has really streamlined the process. Your knowledge has allowed us to do a much better job assisting those who really need help.
- Mike
Prevent Blindness America continued its successful partnership with Luxottica to distribute vouchers for adult eye and vision care to needy families through the Healthy Eyes program.
Two eye problems, amblyopia (lazy eye) and strabismus (crossed eyes), continue to have an impact on the lives of hundreds of thousands of children nationwide. Other families may simply have a difficult time obtaining prescription glasses for children who need them to see well and learn in school. Vision screeners trained and certified through the Prevent Blindness America certification program screened more than 2.2 million children and helped identify 237,000 children with potential vision problems and refer them to eye doctors for professional care. For families with financial need, Prevent Blindness America partnered with VSP again last year to provide nearly 5,000 Sight for Students vouchers with a value of almost $750,000 to pay for children’s eye care.

Prevent Blindness America has maintained its long tradition of innovation in children’s vision issues with the ongoing efforts of the National Center for Children’s Vision and Eye Health. Funded by a grant from the Maternal and Child Health Bureau of the Health Resources and Services Administration, the Center seeks to develop a coordinated approach to vision care for young children that includes the uniform implementation of successful children’s vision screening programs.

Leading experts in the fields of ophthalmology, optometry, pediatrics, research and public health along with family representation serve on the National Expert Panel for the Center. Panel recommendations for a comprehensive approach to children’s vision screening will include performance measures, uniform management and integration of patient data collected during vision screenings, and best practices for children’s vision screening, as supported by available research evidence.
Five states — Ohio, Massachusetts, Illinois, Georgia, and North Carolina — were also selected to serve as pilot sites for the Center and were charged with forming their own multi-disciplinary coalition to study possible strategies for universal vision screening of children in their particular state. At the state level, programs support the mission of the Center by providing a preview of how the new screening systems will work, key stakeholders to engage and educate, and the development of best practice examples that can be shared with others. At the same time the Center provides the necessary technical assistance to the state pilot sites to ensure that their work is aligned with that of the National Expert Panel.

The Prevent Blindness America Investigator Awards are research grants presented annually to scientifically-based studies that seek to end unnecessary vision loss. To date, Prevent Blindness America has awarded more than $1 million to eye and vision research projects.

The 2012 Investigator Award was presented to the “Cost and Effectiveness of an Eye Care Adherence Program for Philadelphia School Children with Significant Visual Impairment” study led by Dr. Levin, Chief of Pediatric Ophthalmology and Ocular Genetics at Wills Eye Institute. A panel of experts coordinated by the Association for Research in Vision and Ophthalmology (ARVO) made the final selection.

Led by the Prevent Blindness America Northwest Region Director, a Children’s Vision and Eye Health Summit, modeled after the work of the National Center, was conducted in Portland, Oregon.

Stakeholders from across the state came together to advance best practices, consistency and uniform data collection throughout the state. The group continues to meet, and a Summit is currently being planned for the state of Washington.
